Winston Spencer Churchill Traces Route Roosevelt Party Must Take

The account given by the Right Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill, Britsh minister of colonies, of his expedition in British East Africa traces almost step by step the route to be followed by the Roosevelt party. During his trip Mr. Churchill's English servant succumbed to a mysterious and swiftly fatal fever, but the minister and the other two white men who accompanied him suffered no ill effects from their equatorial journey. According to Mr. Churchill's observations, it would seem that by far the most interesting portion of the Roosevelt trip will be through the Uganda rotectorate, where travel is by foot, bicycle or caravan, unless one elects to ride upon a seat borne on the shoulders of natives. The Uganda railroad. contrary to the suggestion of its name. does not penetrate Uganda, but only reaches to it, its inland terminus be ing at Port Florence, on Lake Victoria. Not until the railroad has been left behind and the party enters Uganda proper, the garden of flowers and butterflies, will the supremest possibilities of the exploration be realized. Sinister beasts there are without number, but the forests that conceal them are of surpassing grandeur and the foliage of indescribable beauty. The natives are friendly, gentle of manner and of considerable intelligence. The air is soft and cool. Yet the contrast between appearance and reality is striking, for this enchanted land is cursed with malignant attributes. Every white man seems to feel a sense of undefinable oppression, and Mr. Churchill says that it will never be a white man's country. "A cut will not the ponderous brute came on as if ne ecomes a running sore. One day a man feels perfectly well; the next, for no apparent cause, he is prostrate with malaria, and with malaria of a pe- tain seems to roll itself up in the in the third or fourth attack to blackwater fever." A daily dose of ten grains of quinine served to ward off malaria in the case of the Churchill party impression gained from Mr The Churchill's writings is that the traveler has less to fear from the ferocious beasts that inhabit the alluringly beautiful fastnesses than from the transmitted by the tsetse fly, which, when infected in a manner yet undetermined by scientists, becomes a deadly assassin. But the zone of the tsetse fly is known; his home is in the trees and bushes and near the water, and he may be avoided. Thus the danger from this source, broadly speaking, may be said to be proporionate with the risk which the explorer voluntarily assumes in the pursuit the frightful concussions of modern of his explorations, allowance being firearms, he has swerved sharp to the Dr. Gordon G. Ives, Osteopath: made always for bad judgment and right, and is now moving across our kirksville graduate. Room 224 Reed the unexpected fortunes of the hunt. front, broadside on, at the same swift that reach to the elbow and veils to completely protect the head and neck. Mosquito netting incloses the camper at night, and in the morning he habitsirable tenant that may have wiggled in under cover of darkness. In the case of the Roosevelt party Major Edgar A. Mearns will be always at hand with his antiseptics.

But, however handicapped the tsetse fly may be in the future pursuit of his nefarious calling, his assassinations of cording to Mr. Churchill, this deadly | hope of glory, for who can tell what nsect first appeared in the kingdom of Uganda in the summer of 1901, and within five years had killed two out of three of all the inhabitants, no less than 200,000 persons dying from the polson which he spread. "It might have been expected," wrote Sir H. Hesketh Bell, the governor of Uganda, to Mr. Churchill, in reply to a query on the subject, "that, even though the negroes showed inability to grasp the theory of the transmission of disease by the agency of insects, the undenia-ble deadliness of the countries bordering on the lake shore would have induced them to flee from the stricken ier districts inland a refuge from the pestilence that was slaying them by thousands. An extraordinary fatalism, however, seems to have paralyzed the natives, and while deploring the sadness of their fate, they appear to have accepted death almost with apathy." But the helplessness of the native has given place to the knowledge of the white man, before which the tsetse fly has fallen back, and the sleeping sickness, if not conquered, is less be feared than a few years ago. Miles of brush, fertile breeding places of its place is growing the vigorous cit nella grass.

But it will be some time before th party reaches Uganda and for the first six months headquarters will be at Nairobi, from which point numberless excursions will be made. Nairobi is the capital of the East African protectorate, and is 327 miles from Mom basa by rail. It is built on lowland and is not particularly healthful, and of its 14,000 residents less than 600 are white. There are 10,000 natives tioned a brigade of the king's African ifles, and the town is the headquar ers of the administration and the cen ral office of the Uganda railroad. Be re Nairobi is reached the Roosevel party will have an interesting railroad journey, which will be accomplished with less discomfort than one might imagine would be possible over a road the locomotives of which depend upon wood for fuel. Built by the British overnment and steadily improved, the road has reached a state of creditable The roadbed is good and the gradual incline is overcome at fairly good speed. When Mr. Churchill made this trip he occupied a seat on the cowcatcher, and it is safe to say that the Americans will be satisfied with no lesser point of vantage. The ountry perhaps from an old-fashione estcher of an engine. As the land anfolds itself before the travellers, game of endless variety will be seen. and deep gorges crossed while occasional plantations of cotton, rubber and fibre and trim little railway stations will give a touch of modera color to the otherwise prehistoric cene. On either side the train may be seen an endless procession of wild enimals, which seem to have learned that the formidable looking locome tive cannot leave the rails over which moves through their domain. Troops of zebras, herds of antelope, black wildebeestes, herds of red konkoni, and, in fact, most every imaginab! beast is to be seen, with the exception the lion, the rhinoceros and the elephant. Good fortune may even bring these within the ken of the railpassenger, and at Simba, popularly known as "the place of lions," the guides generally promise the sight of the regal animal. But this is excer tional, and the paucity of this game is due to the greed of the hunter, for not so long ago it was the practice to stop these trains wherever opportur ity offered to shoot a lion or two. royal vermin have profited by the experience of unfortunate relatives, and now the stopping of a train or wagon is the cue for the exit from the scene of this wily animal. Hunters travel ing by caravan upon sighting a lies are said now to drop unobserved from their wagon while the vehicle itself continues in motion. The absence of the rhinoceros rfom this railway review is popularly credited to the fat of an illadvised member of the species, who tried conclusions with a swiftly moving locomotive. The ele phant is still more reserved and nothing but the rarest chance will permit a view of him while a train of cars i within his sight. Contrary to popular opinion, pehaps, the courage of the Roosevelt party will not be tested by its en counters with lions, for this beast beats a hasty retreat when approached, and only shows its fighting qualities when at bay. If a lion is slaughtered it will be known that the hunters pur saed with relentlesaness, disregarding the pitfalls of the rough country where a misstep means disaster Rather will valor be shown in the slaying of a rhinoceros. The hugbody offers an easy mark, but the bull's-eye is the eye or heart. Unless you hit a vital spot he takes his turn at you promptly. Mr. Churchill got a rhinoceros out of a herd of three "Great is the moral effect of a for who advances. Everybody fired. Still a scratch festers. In the third were invulnerable; as if the were an year of residence even a small wound engine or some great steam barge impervious to bullets, insensible to pain or fear. Thirty seconds more and he will close. An impalpable curculiarly persistent kind, turning often mind, revealing a mental picture strangely lighted, yet very still, where objects have new values and where a patch of white grass in the foreground four or five yards away seems to possess astonishing significance. It is there that the last two shots that yet remain before the resources of civilization are exhausted must be fired. There is time to reflect with some detachment that, after all, we are the aggressors; we it is who have forced the conflict by an unprovoked assault with murderous intent upon a peaceful herbivore; that if there is such a thing as right and wrong b tween man and beast-and who shall say there is not?-right is plainly on his side; there is time for this before I perceive that, stunned and dazed by some one says he is down, and I fire instead at his smaller companion, atready some distance off upon the plain, but one rhinoceros hunt is like another, except in its details, and I will not occupy the reader with the Suffice it to say that, in all the ele n ents of neurotic experience, such an encounter seems to me fully equal to half an hour's brisk skirmish at six or seven hundred yards-and with an important addition. In war there is a cause, there is duty, there is the may be won before night? But here at the end is only a hide, a horn and
